

COUNSELLING TUTOR

An Introduction to Online and Telephone Counselling

A free course by Counselling Tutor

A useful free CPD course created by Counselling Tutor that could be of benefit to CPCAB student counsellors who need to move their face-to-face placement online temporarily, due to social distancing. This free course can be embedded to enrich your existing teaching and learning and introduce some of the core themes to hold safe and ethical practice.

The ten-hour course is free to access for CPCAB centres and candidates. It gives candidates studying the Diploma in Therapeutic Counselling Level 4 (TC-L4) and higher levels some basic training to support their development in working safely and ethically while using online technology and/or the telephone during this challenging time.

The introductory course offers ten hours of guided tuition, self-directed learning – all online, accessed via a secure portal. The course is self-directed learning via the online lectures and resources; this means that students can work at their own pace and complete the course without any external time pressure.

A completion certificate will be issued to evidence course completion.

Course Disclaimer

PLEASE NOTE: This introduction course is not a formal qualification. This CPD course is designed to help students adapt to online placement work during the time of social distancing. This course does not qualify a student to practice as an online and telephone counsellor after its completion.
